My Scheherazade

Tristen Nichols

If I had not the eyes to see your grace
And tenderness you wear upon your sleeve,
Then life would simply seem to be a waste,
For beauty is a gift which one should see.

And all the ancient marvels that you say
And all the fragile treasures you have seen
Could never hold a candle to your day,
Could never match the brilliance of your beam.

If I could take the days I spent with you
And put them on display for all to peep,
We'd have an empty Hermitage and Louvre
Like Wonders of the World had fell asleep.

The Cupid stuck his arrow through my heart
And showed me who was really, truly art.
