We are pleased by the favorable responses on the student note produced by the combined efforts of Elba Gillenwater, Jr. and Gregory R. Gorrell. This detailed and somewhat technical commentary should aid the West Virginia Legislature if it decides to draft any new public school financing procedure. Additionally, we hope the note will help the members of the bar as they analyze the various issues of the Serrano decision relevant to West Virginia. This note has eliminated any doubts about the difficulty of co-ordinating student group projects. Several candidates are now completing research for a comprehensive note we hope to publish in a later issue.

As a new feature of the West Virginia Law Review, we have published a brief article under the heading of "Comments." Without requiring the detailed preparation of a lead article, we hope members of the bench and bar will be more willing to comment on their particular areas of expertise.

We hope you enjoy this issue of Volume 75. Comments concerning the articles contained in it will be welcomed.
