W. P. Wysong	-----	Webster Springs

The American Society of International Law will hold its twenty-third annual meeting at the Willard Hotel in the City of Washington, April 24th to April 27th, inclusive. The program for the three-day meeting was recently announced in the American Bar Association Journal. Charles Evans Hughes, President, will deliver the opening address on Wednesday, April 24th, at 8:30 P. M.

As recently announced, permanent headquarters of the West Virginia Bar Association have been officially opened at the State Capitol Building, in Charleston. The headquarters of the Association are in Room 206, adjoining the Supreme Court rooms and have been appropriately furnished. Proceedings of the West Virginia Bar Association for each year are being collected, as well as other literature of interest to the profession. The room is available at all times for members of the Association and others while in Charleston.

During the session of the West Virginia Legislature just closed, the Bar Association of the City of Charleston entertained at its regular monthly meetings various leaders from the Senate and House of Delegates. This Association has also recently entertained as its guests the new elective officers of the state.

In order that news of the West Virginia Bar Association may be made as extensive as possible, the Secretaries of the various Bar Associations throughout the state are requested to send in items of interest in their locality for publication in the Quarterly. Such items should be mailed to J. C. Morrison, Jr., Box 1208, Charleston, West Virginia.

S. B. Avis has recently become associated with Joseph N. Kenna, of Charleston, in the practice of law.
